Ike Scoffs at Idea Plan Could Lead to Dictator

By TOM NELSON
United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON (UP)—President Eisenhower today heatedly rejected charges that his defense reorganization plan would make it possible for some individual in the future to seize control of the armed forces.

The President said it would make just as much sense to say that Congress might go nuts and abolish the whole Defense Department.

The President's remarks were touched off at his news conference by a reporter's statement that Defense Secretary Neil H. McElroy had conceded Tuesday that under the reorganization plan an individual service command chief could be stripped of everything but his aide and orderly.

This is just not possible, the President said, if we are sensible people.

To a reporter who brought up congressional criticism of the defense plan, the President snapped: Had the reporter read the (proposed) law? The reporter said he had. The President retorted, no you haven't.

Meanwhile, McElroy told the House Armed Services Committee the Defense Department could not function under a bill sponsored by foes of the President's reorganization plan. The bill was sponsored by

Ex-Communist Can Return to America

By A. E. PEDERSEN, JR.
United Press Staff Correspondent

HELSINKI, Finland (UP)—William Heikkila, a one-armed Finnish ex-Communist who was deported from San Francisco last week, waited jubilantly here today for his return ticket to the United States.

Heikkila, 52, was "overjoyed" when he was told U.S. authorities have decided they were wrong to deport him so swiftly because of his past Communist associations.

"This is the most wonderful thing that ever happened to me in my life," he said.

The deported Fin arrived here by air Tuesday night, hatless, coatless and without baggage in freezing weather. He checked in at a hotel while he pondered his future in a strange country whose language he does not speak. He was born in Finland but left the country at the age of 10 weeks.

Heikkila, 52, was "overjoyed" when he was told U.S. authorities have decided they were wrong to deport him so swiftly because of his past Communist associations.

Heikkila talked to her by telephone Tuesday from Helsinki, the first time he had a chance to speak to her since he was seized by Immigration Service authorities and rushed out of the country.

Heikkila's attorney, Lloyd E. McMurry, said in San Francisco he would push his efforts to have Immigration officials held in contempt of court for deporting Heikkila. He said the action was taken while the case was still pending in the courts.

He said the decision of Immigration Commissioner Joseph M. Swig to return Heikkila was in effect "an admission of guilt and an attempt to evade the consequences."

Attorney General Edmund G. Brown of California demanded a full investigation of the case to prevent "future high-handed action."

Sen. Thomas C. Hennings Jr., (D-Mo.) said in Washington Tuesday he is drafting a bill to prevent the "type of abduction" used in deporting Heikkila.

Heikkila was arrested by Immigration officers in San Francisco Friday and flown under guard in a U.S. border patrol plane to Vancouver, B.C. He spent most of the week end in a Vancouver jail, then on Sunday was put aboard a Canadian airliner bound over the North Pole to Amsterdam.

After an overnight stop there in custody of the Dutch police, he came to Helsinki in a Finnish airliner.

Heikkila who left San Francisco without money except what happened to be in his pocket when he was arrested, a Canadian on the transpolar plane gave him $10 and friends in San Francisco sent money to finance his temporary stay in Finland.

The Russians indicated they received money from the Soviet war veterans committee to pay their transportation and were prepared to pay their other expenses.

Says Farmer Must Work Part Time

WASHINGTON (UP)—It takes an off-farm job to keep the small farmer in business these days, according to House Speaker Sam Rayburn (D-Tex.).

Rayburn told the National Independent Dairies Assn. Tuesday night that "corporation farming is coming, and that is a bad thing for the country."

He said the small farmer was "just about through" unless at least one member of the family has off-farm employment.

Noting that "some people in places in government" has done nothing to discourage the trend toward economic concentration, Rayburn told association members: "Stand up and fight for your existence."

A rail road spokesman called Weeks' remedies "distinctly disconcerting." Daniel P. Loomis, president of the Association of American Railroads, said it "falls to deal with many of the difficulties in the railroad situation, and treats inadequately most of those with which it does deal."

Refusal to grant tax relief and the proposal for temporary financial assistance "offers no immediate practical help" and the program in general fails "short of placing the railroad industry in a fair competitive position."

Tom Weber remained where he was until the hoofbeats of Lily's horse were faint and then faded out altogether. Finally he turned and went back to his own horse. He stood beside it a moment, then, exclaiming softly, vaulted into the saddle.

He sent the animal forward, toward the road and crossed into Lobo territory.

There was the dull sound of cattle movement. Weber climbed down from his horse and stretching out, put his ear to the ground.

house. He turned his horse then and sent it away from the Rawlings ranch.

Helen Weber watched her husband toy with his breakfast. She made no comment, but waited until he had stopped pretending to eat and then cleared the table. "Charlie," she said then. "If you can spare the team I would like to drive over to the Navak's. I promised Anna that I would come and see her today."

She climbed up on the wagon and started into the lane that led to the road a quarter of a mile away.

It was a mile and a half to the Barkerville road and when Helga reached it she turned north.

She inhaled sharply when a glance revealed to blackened remains of Tom's cabin. The barn, she noted, had been burned recently.

She turned the wagon in toward the burned ruins and pulled up. Suned on the wagon seat she searched the area in all directions.

"Tom," she suddenly called. Tom Weber came out of the patch of woods, walked toward the farm wagon. Helga waited until he was only a dozen feet away. Then she said, "I want to thank you for what you did yesterday."

"I did nothing," Weber said. "You saved his life. They would have killed him."

"He can't fight them," Weber said. "They're professional killers."

"I know," she said. "What is it they want? We are not hurting them. We are farmers."

"You're in the way," Weber said. "Mike Denver doesn't want you around."

But Mr. Denver is the man who sold us the land, the man brought us all here."

"He's changed his mind, or maybe that was part of his overall scheme. He needed the money you paid him for the land. Mike's got a twisted brain. He doesn't figure things out like most people."

Helga made a quick gesture toward the burned buildings. "You have no roof, you cannot live like an animal without shelter."

"I'm used to it."

"But it is not right. Not when your father's house is so near when we have plenty of room."

Weber shook his head. "My father and I chose our paths a long time ago. His went one way and mine another."

"Tom," Helga said earnestly, "your father has told me everything. He—he did not spare himself. But the man who is my husband today is not the man who was your father when you went away. He works hard and—he does not drink."

Weber nodded soberly. "I am not the same man who left here 11 years ago."

Her bosom rose and fell as she drew a deep breath and exhaled. "I cannot say more than I have said." She picked up the lines, then looked at him steadily. "If there—any message you want me to give to your father? Anything you want to say to him?"

He shook his head. "Just to you. Draw your shades at night."

"How do you know our shades have not been drawn?"

Weber shook his head, turned and walked back toward the woods. Helga watched him a moment, then a faint smile played over her mouth and she continued on out of the farmstead toward the road, it was announced today.

He'll Like Children
When He Has His Own

Proclamation

WHEREAS, the weather in this section is generally wet but warm, and WHEREAS, continued wearing of felt hats under cloudy and rainy skies creates an excessive inconvenience to male citizens of our city,

NOW THEREFORE, I, George T. Frazier, Mayor of Hope, do hereby proclaim Thursday, April 24, 1958, to be STRAW HAT DAY in our city, come rain or come shine, and call on all male citizens in this city to put away felt hats and to greet the dawn of April 24, 1958, wearing STRAW HATS.

GEORGE T. FRAZIER
MAYOR OF HOPE

Dear Cherie: A man's attitude toward children before he's married, is no indication of the kind of husband or father he'll make. I think most men are a bit timid in the presence of the very young. It's quite a different story when they're confronted with their own offspring. In fact, the man who didn't care much for babies before marriage often becomes a fabulously tender father after the stork leaves his bundle from heaven. Men are traditionally shy of children, until they have younglings of their own. After all, the sum and substance of whether a child is angel or demon, depends on whether its yours or not. There's nothing strange or unnatural in your fiance's attitude. If he's kind, soft and affectionate toward you, he'll be equally tender with his children.

Dear Dorothy Dix: Because we have been going with boys who don't have nice reputations, we've acquired bad names. Now that we've quit associating with them, people still talk. What can we do?

TWO CHASTENED GIRLS

Dear Girls: Earning back a reputation that's been through the mill isn't easy. Perseverance will do it, though. Just keep on being nice, well-mannered, quiet and stay completely away from your former pals. When folks see you mean it, they'll admit you have changed.

Dear Dorothy Dix: Do you know how hard it is for a girl to be good? ? ? ? ?

FRAN
Dear Fran: Yes, indeed, and I also know that it's much tougher to be bad! If you need convincing, ask to visit a home for unwed mothers one of these days, and see how miserable these girls are. Most of them are young girls who thought like you, it was hard to be good.

Dear Dorothy Dix: I've been engaged to Perry for three years

Bitlick, Mr. and Mrs. Windale Stone, Mr. and Mrs. Benton York and Terry, Mrs. Linda Griffin, all of McCaskill and Chase Stephens of Fort Worth, Texas.

McElroy said it would abolish so many jobs under the defense secretary that "I don't believe we could function..."

McElroy also told the armed services group:

"The military is working at 'forced draft' on missile delegation system which it is expected will be ready by the time Russia has any substantial number of intercontinental missiles."

"But even so, there will be no more than 30 minutes, and probably less, to get going on a retaliatory effort; this small warning time is one of the reasons the military command structure must be streamlined."

"He does not see how the armed forces could be 'merged' under the law sought by the President even if anyone wanted to merge them; rather they would be 'integrated' under a unified command."

STRIKE HALTS FLIGHTS

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — All flights in and out of Argentina's 72 airports were stopped today by a strike of control tower technicians, radio operators and airport service crews. The strike, in support of wage demands, was scheduled to continue until midnight Wednesday.

Standard Insurance Claim Form Sought

LITTLE ROCK (UPI) — Representatives of Arkansas insurance companies, hospitals and medical association heard a plea today for standardized claim forms.

The meeting was called by Insurance Commissioner Harvey Cahill.

L. A. Orsini, a vice president of the Health Insurance Council, described the forms proposed for national adoption. He said they would speed payment of claims and simplify filing for doctors and hospitals.

Jim McDowell of Oklahoma

City, an insurance executive, endorsed the standard form idea. He said the biggest value would be in reduced cost of processing.

"We work out our problems ourselves or they will be worked out for us," McDowell said.

R. B. Arnold of Dallas told how a committee of insurance companies, hospitals and doctors was organized in Texas to "attack all insurance problems." He said the committee acts as a deterrent on abuses, and with a little pressure can persuade offending companies to change their practices.

Combs said there was no reason Arkansas could not organize a similar committee.
